Police urge locals to be vigilant as crims return

NHULUNBUY police Senior Sergeant John Worrall is urging locals to be vigilant and secure their property after a number of offenders have returned to the region after spending time in jail or rehab.

"Please ring police straight away when something is happening in your street or neighbourhood," Sen Sgt Worrall said.

"If people tell us about it straight away at least we've got the opportunity to deal with it."

New path to connect town centre and beach

A FUNDING boost of $18,500 from the Department of Business will enable the Nhulunbuy Corporation to build a new walkway between the pool and the beach.

NCL CEO Angela MacMillan said

the walkway would take locals and visitors from Westral Street along the pool fence down a set of stairs, across the town lagoon and to the beach. The project is set to be completed at the end of the calendar year.

East Arnhemland workers' productivity out-performs NT average

DEVELOPING East Arnhem Limited is making local economic information more accessible to local businesses and investors.

"When speaking with investors from outside the region, Northern Territory development agencies will need to speak confidently about local economic conditions," DEAL CEO Carley Scott said.

"Providing reliable, skillfully modelled and regularly updated data is key to addressing these questions, and our new EconomyID tool will strongly position East Arnhem in regional investment discussions."

Economy.id is an online, interactive product developed in partnership with modelling experts at idConsulting.

"The new economic data forms part of Developing East Arnhem Limited's website and is available to the public," Ms Scott said.

"Our economic data shows that East Arnhem Land's worker productivity out-performs the Northern Territory average across the 'Information, Media and Telecommunications,' and 'Administrative and Support Services' industries.

"It also shows a significant increase in productivity for workers in the local 'Arts and Recreation' industry.

"The new economic data also allows Developing East Arnhem Limited to calculate the direct and flow on impacts of major projects," Ms Scott said.

"The impact of Government investment in construction, for example, will have significant flow on benefits to local health and education industries as well.

"It is perfect timing, having such a useful tool in the lead up to discussions at the major projects, and major investment forums to be held in Darwin later this year."

The Economy.id product had been chosen for its ease of use, depth of data sources, and the regularity that data is updated," Ms Scott said.

Economic.id is available online at www.developingeastarnhem.com.au.
