Quiz questions

1. True or false? An echidna has spines but no hair.
2. What is echolocation?
3. Which Australian capital cities have botanical gardens?
4. Which organisation owned and operated the first electronic computer in Australia (and the fifth electronic computer in the world)?
5. True or false? The Sun weighs more than all the planets, asteroids and comets in the solar system put together.

1. False. Each echidna spine is a single, enormous hair, while a second type of hair between the spines keeps the animal warm. 2. Echolocation is the use of sound waves and their echoes to locate objects. 3. All of Australia's capital cities have botanical gardens. 4. CSIRO owned Australia's first electronic computer. (The computer was called CSIRAC). 5. True. The Sun makes up around 99.8% of the solar system's mass. Everything else put together only weighs 0.2%.
